

WAR ON THE SALVATION ARMY.

A wing of it in Bleeker Building excites the neighbors' indignation.

The Salvation Army is in trouble again. This time the field of battle is in Bleeker Building, in the staid old Ninth ward, near the corner of Morton street. There a battalion of the army has been quartered about a month to the great annoyance of neighbors. The building belongs to the Gwyer estate, and the part occupied by the Salvation Army is the large hall which Mr. Gwyer let to ex-Alderman John W. Jacobus, chiefly for the use of the Ninth District Republican Association. The hall is on the third floor. The rooms on the second floor are used as dwellings by the occupants of stores on the ground floor. There are a number of lodges rooms on the top floor.

All the tenants complained to the landlord of the annoyance caused by the army, and some threatened to break their leases if it were not stopped. Mr. Gwyer instituted legal proceedings against Mr. Jacobus and the army to compel them to vacate the premises. The army held the fort by virtue of a lease from Mr. Jacobus until May 1. At their nightly meetings the legal contest impending was referred to as the effort of the devil to break up the Lord's work in this place, and the army constantly boasted that they would never leave the Lord's sake. This view of the case was prominently put forth in speeches and prayers, and help was constantly invoked in prayer to God to sustain the army and to bring its minions to break the lease. A Sun reporter sought in vain to find a tenant who did not think the army a nuisance.

Bleeker street, under the hall, said: "It is a regular nuisance. They keep up a sort of a tramp to attract people to the hall, and when they walk through the floor and fall into my rooms. On Sunday they begin at 6 o'clock A. M. and keep it up until 11 A. M., and block up the street so that female customers are afraid to come to the store. I do not want to interfere with religion, but this sort of thing is a nuisance."

Mr. Shaw, who keeps a music store at 278 Bleeker street, said: "They have made a disturbance with their noise, and I am anxious to have them stop. They parade the streets and gather unruly crowds, who come to the front of the building, not to worship, but to gossip. They are a nuisance."
